

The History of

Prin. What saist thou, mistris quickly? how doth thy husband? I loue him well, he is an honest man.

Host. Good my Lord heare me.

Fal. Prethee let her alone and list to me.

Prin. What saist thou lacke?

Fal. The other night I fell a sleepe here behind the Arras, and had my pocket pickt, this house is turnde bawdy house, they picke pockets.

Prin. What didst thou lose, lacke?

Fal. Wilt thou beleene me, Hal? three or foure bonds of forty pound a peece, and a scale ring of my grandfathers.

Prin. A trifle, some eight penny matter.

Host. So I told him my Lord, and I said, I heard your Grace say so: and my Lord he speakes most vilely of you, like a foule mouth'd man, as he is, and said, he would cudgell you.

Prin. What he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in meels.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee, then a stued prune, nor no more truth in thee, then in a drawne Foxe; and for womanhood, maid Marion may bee the deputies wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing, what thing?

Fal. What thing? why, a thing to thanke God on.

Host. I am nothing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it, I am an honest mans wife, & setting thy Knighthoode aside, thou art a knaue to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knaue thou?

Fal. What beast? why, an Otter.

Prin. An Otter sir Iohn? why an Otter?

Fal. VVhy? shees neither fish nor flesh, a man knowes not where to haue her.

Host. Thou art an vnjust man in saying so, thou or any man knowes where to haue me, thou knaue thou.

Prin. Thou sayest true, Hostes, and he slaunders thee most grosely.

Host. So he doth you, my Lord, and said this other day You ought

Henry the fourth.

ought him a thousand pound.

Prince. Sirra, doe I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound Hal? a million: thy loue is a million: thou owest me thy loue.

Host. Nay, my Lord, hee cald you lacke, and said he cudgell you.

Fal. Did I, Bardoll?

Bar. Indeepe, sir Iohn, you saide so.

Fal. Yea, if he said my ring was copper.

Pri. I say tis copper: darst thou be as good as thy word?

Fal. Why Hal? thou knowest, as thou art but a man, but as thou art Prince, I feare thee, as I feare the roari

Lyons Whelpe.

Prince. And why not as the Lyon?

Fal. The King himselfe, is to be feared as the Lyon: thou thinke ile feare thee, as I feare thy father? nay, an pray God my girdle breake.

Prin. O, if it should, how would thy guts fal about thee, but sirra, ther's no roome for faith, truth, nor honest bosome of thine, it is all fillde vpp with guttes, and Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket? v hore son impudentimboist rascall, if there were any thing in thy pocket, but tauerne reckonings, memorādums of bay ses, and one poore peniworth of Sugar-candie to m long winded: if thy pocket were intricht with any otheries but these I am a villaine; and yet you will stand will not pocket vp wrong: art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Doe st thou heare, hal? thou knowst in the stationery, Adam fell, & what should poore lacke Fal sta the daies of villanie? thou seest, I haue more flesh then man, & therefore more fraity. You confesse then you

Prin. It appeares so by the story.

Fal. Hostesse, I forgiue thee, go, make ready, break thy husband, looke to thy seruants, cherish thy ghe shalt find me tractable to any honest reason: thou pacified still: nay, prethee be gone.
